PAGE 2

Before the game: who you are and what you know.

PAGE 3

Rounds 1–3: read each one only when the Inspector says so.

PAGE 4

Your notes and the suspect quick list.

Before the game

Your firm, Rook Catering, supplies the Blue Lantern's food and drink. Tonight you built the champagne tower, sixty coupes high, and poured it at 11:55. Gus only ever drinks from his own gold-rimmed coupe, which you keep on a silver tray beside the tower. You wear a black cat mask.

YOUR SECRET

Gus owes you three months of bills, and this week he said he would switch to a cheaper supplier in the new year. You were furious. Also, the "bootleg champagne" in the tower is half sparkling cider, to save money. Gus never noticed.

You are innocent

At 11:55 you were behind the tower pouring for the guests, in full view, and you stayed there until the lights went out.

HOW TO PLAY TONIGHT

- ◆ Read each round only when the Inspector starts it. Do what it says while you mingle.
- ◆ You may keep your secret until your booklet tells you to share it. You may not lie about anything printed on an evidence card.
- ◆ In Round 1, swap the rumour on your Rumor card with as many guests as you can.
- ◆ Stuck? Ask someone a question, or go and study the evidence table.

PLAYING DANA

Your manner: Busy, proud and practical. Straighten glasses, wipe imaginary spills and take any complaint about the drinks very personally.

Rounds 1–3

Round 1

Read only when the Inspector starts Round 1

Share exactly what you saw at 11:55: you filled Gus's gold-rimmed coupe and set it on your tray. A guest in a silver fox mask stepped up, said "I'll take the host his glass", lifted it off the tray and carried it to Gus. You stayed behind the tower pouring for everyone else.

Round 2

Read only when the Inspector starts Round 2

Admit the unpaid bills if asked. Point out that every coupe on the tower was clean (Evidence 3). Add: the fox at the tower spoke smoothly and quietly, nothing like Charlie Ashby's usual chatter.

Round 3

Read only when the Inspector starts Round 3

Confess about the sparkling cider if it comes up, and laugh: "I'd never hurt a customer. I'd only short-change one." Ask whether the photographer caught the fox on film.

Notes & suspects

YOUR NOTES: WHO SEEMS NERVOUS? WHOSE STORY HAS CHANGED?

BEFORE YOU VOTE

At the end, everyone fills in a ballot: who, how and why, plus the clue that convinced you.
