

A TALE OF CANDLEWICK HOLLOW

The Legend of the Lantern Ghost

Long ago, on the very first Halloween that the candle works on the hill was open, the first chandler of Candlewick Hall walked the long gallery at midnight with a lantern, checking that every candle in the house was safely lit.

Every Halloween since, guests at the Candlewick Costume Ball have watched for that lantern. It appears without a sound outside the first of the nine tall windows, drifts slowly past each one, and winks out at the last.

Nobody has ever seen who carries it. Some say the old chandler is still checking every wick. Some say it is just a trick of the candlelight. And some say that whoever sees the Lantern Ghost will have good luck all year.

Watch the gallery windows tonight. If the lantern comes, make a wish, and keep your eyes open.
